

Lauren Addario works as Internship Coordinator at New Mexico Highlands University. She works with the community and cultural institutions through the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs to effectively place and manage students in professional internships. In addition, she teaches Drawing and Visual Concepts at New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Lauren has also worked as the director of New Mexico Highlands University Digital Film Boot Camp where she oversaw a two week residential intensive for high school students, managed day to day activities, a 5 person staff, organized guest instructors, and taught seminars. She was the assistant director of Santa Fe Lucky 7 documentary project where she assisted in web design for the Santa Fe Lucky 7 documentary team website <http://www.santafelucky7.com>. She helped oversee the web team in the creation of Flash elements, html and css. She helped keep the project in line and on schedule for deliverables. The website documented artists for the 7th annual SITE Santa Fe Biennial.

In 2007 and 2008, she collaborated with another student for her masters degree to develop Emergence: A New View of Life's Origin, a traveling exhibit devoted to the Santa Fe Institute's groundbreaking research about the origins of life on Earth. The exhibition was installed in the National Science Foundation atrium from February 5-29th, 2008. Lauren has a BFA in painting and a Masters in Media Arts and Computer Science from New Mexico Highlands University.